

Contributors to this Issue

Abhakorn, Jirapa

Jirapa Abhakorn received her Ph.D. degree in Education, Communication, and Applied Linguistics from Newcastle University. She is currently an Assistant Professor of Applied Linguistics at the Graduate School of Language and Communication, National Institute of Development Administration, Bangkok, Thailand. Her research interests lie in the fields of discourse studies and conversation analysis, language teaching methodology and policy, and language assessment.

Alavi, Sepideh

Sepideh Alavi holds a PhD in TEFL and works as an assistant professor in Shiraz University. Her research interests include technology enhanced language learning and extensive reading.

Briesmaster, Mark

Mark Briesmaster holds a PhD. in Intercultural Education (Biola University, United States). He is Assistant Professor in the English Language Pedagogy Program at Universidad Católica de Temuco, Chile. Dr. Briesmaster is also Director of the Master's Degree in Teaching English as a Foreign Language (TEFL) at the same institution. He has taught undergraduate and postgraduate courses on English language, English language teaching methodology and research in different Chilean universities. His research interests include foreign language teaching and learning, foreign language anxiety, learning styles, and pre-service teacher education.

Díaz, Claudio

Claudio Díaz holds a PhD. in Education and a Master's degree in Linguistics (both obtained at Universidad de Concepción, Chile). He is Associate Professor, Director of the Research and Teacher Development Unit, and Director of the Master's Degree in English Language Teaching, Learning, and Assessment Innovation at Universidad de Concepción, Chile. Dr. Díaz teaches undergraduate and postgraduate courses in English language teaching methodology and assessment. His research interests include English language teaching and learning, assessment, pre-service teacher education, and English language pre-service and in-service teachers' pedagogical beliefs.

Ebrahimzadeh, Mohsen

Mohsen Ebrahimzadeh has an MA in TEFL and a BA in Translation Studies from Shiraz University. He enjoys working with children as a high school teacher and researching ways to enhance second language learning. His research interests include game-enhanced language learning, vocabulary learning, and the use of technology in educational settings.

Etchegaray, Paulo

Paulo Etchegaray holds a Master's degree in Teaching English as a Foreign Language (TEFL) (Universidad Católica de Temuco, Chile). He is Professor in the English Language Pedagogy Program at Universidad Católica de Temuco, Chile. Mr. Etchegaray has taught undergraduate courses on English language teaching methodology and research at different Chilean universities. His research interests include foreign language teaching and learning, English language pre-service and in-service teachers' pedagogical beliefs, and pre-service teacher education.

He, Deyuan

Deyuan He is an Assistant Professor at Universiti Brunei Darussalam. He obtained his PhD degree from City University of Hong Kong. His research interests include second language acquisition, world Englishes, and college English teaching. He has published his works in journals like Asian Journal of Applied Linguistics, Educational Studies, TESOL Quarterly, and World Englishes. He also co-edited the book Researching Chinese English: The state of the art, published with Springer in 2017.

Ito, Takehiko

Takehiko Ito obtained a Ph.D. in Psychology from Tohoku University in Sendai. He has been teaching General Psychology, Educational Psychology, and Peace Psychology at Wako University for more than 30 years. His research interests include text mining and mixed methods in psychology and nursing science. He is interested in positive psychology, critical psychology, and peace psychology. He likes doing research, traveling, wining and dining, and doing nothing (=wakeful rest).

Mohammadi, Mohammad Ali

Mohammad Ali Mohammadi has got his MA in TEFL. He has taught in different language institutes in Tehran for six years and now he is an official teacher in the Ministry of Education.

Okada, Yasuko

Yasuko Okada holds an MA in Japanese Language and Linguistics from the University of Washington, Seattle, USA. She has more than fifteen years' experience in teaching English as a foreign language at the university level. She currently lectures at Seisen University and Saitama Women's Junior College, Japan. Her teaching and research interests include the application of new technologies to foreign language education, mixed methods research, classroom-oriented research, and language assessment.

Ortiz, Mabel

Mabel Ortiz holds a PhD. in Linguistics (Universidad de Concepción, Chile) and a Master's degree in Information and Communication Technologies (Universidad de la Frontera, Chile). She is Assistant Professor in the English Language Pedagogy Program at Universidad Católica de la Santísima Concepción, Chile. Dr. Ortiz teaches undergraduate and postgraduate courses in Applied Linguistics, and ICT in language teaching. Her research interests include ICT in language teaching and corrective feedback strategies employed in second/foreign writing collaborative environments.

Prasasti, Wigati Dyah

Wigati Dyah Prasasti is an English Letters graduate and is currently pursuing her doctoral degree in ELT at the Graduate School of Education, Universitas Negeri Malang, East Java, Indonesia. Most of her works are in the realm of literary critics which were presented in various conferences. She also manages an education foundation, Yayasan Wasa Bintang Acitya. Her research interest is in the area of literary and English literary teaching. Feminism and Postcolonialism are two critical theories underlying her research interest.

Rashtchi, Mojgan

Mojgan Rashtchi is an Associate Professor of Applied Linguistics in the Faculty of Foreign Languages of the Islamic Azad University, North Tehran Branch, where she is the Head of the TEFL Department. She has published several articles and books on different topics related to the field. Also, she has participated in several national and international conferences. Her areas of interest include second language teaching research, first language acquisition, and second language learning.

Sawaumi, Takafumi

Takafumi Sawaumi received a Ph.D. degree in Social Psychology from the University of Tokyo in 2015. He is an assistant professor at Ryutsu Keizai University where he teaches English and cross-cultural communication. He also teaches Cultural Psychology at Rikkyo University, Psychology Experiments at the Open University of Japan, Introduction to Communication and Sociolinguistics at Bunkyo Gakuin University. His research interests include cross-cultural studies in interpersonal communication and personality, and implicit measurement of personality such as self-esteem and shyness.

Suarcaya, Putu

Putu Suarcaya is a teaching staff member at Universitas Pendidikan Ganesha in Singaraja, Bali. He has been teaching for quite a number of years. He teaches mostly ESP. Currently, he is pursuing his doctoral degree at the Graduate School of Education, Universitas Negeri Malang, Malang-Indonesia, majoring in ELT. He is interested in understanding the nature of teacher-student relationship from the perspective of critical theory, especially, Derrida's deconstruction and critical literacy.

Tagle, Tania

Tania Tagle holds a PhD. in Education (Universidad de Extremadura, Spain) and a Master's degree in ELT (University of Warwick, England). She is Associate Professor and Director of the English Language Pedagogy Program at Universidad Católica de Temuco, Chile. Dr. Tagle has taught undergraduate and postgraduate courses focused on research, English language teaching methodology, and assessment in this institution. Her research interests include English language teaching and learning, EFL pre-service teacher education, English language pre-service and in-service teachers' pedagogical beliefs, and mentoring practices.

Ubilla, Lucía

Lucía Ubilla holds a PhD. in Linguistics (Universidad de Concepción, Chile) and a Master's degree in TESOL (Greensboro College, United States). She is Assistant Professor in the English Language Pedagogy Program at Universidad Católica de Temuco, Chile. Dr. Ubilla has taught undergraduate and postgraduate courses on English language learning, English language teaching methodology, academic writing in English, linguistics, and research in different Chilean universities. Her research interests include collaborative writing in English, foreign language teaching and learning, and pre-service teacher education.

Widodo, Handoyo Puji

Handoyo Puji Widodo is an Associate Professor at the English Language Center (ELC) at Shantou University. Widodo has published extensively in refereed journals and edited volumes. He has been actively involved in a wide range of (teacher) professional development activities (e.g. joint research projects & peer mentoring programs) in Indonesia and overseas. His areas of specialization include language teaching methodology, language curriculum and materials development, systemic functional linguistics (SFL) in language education, and teacher professional development. His work is grounded in socio-semiotic, socio-cognitive, sociocultural, and critical theories of language pedagogies.