

Contributors to this Issue

Ewing, Michael

Michael Ewing received his MA in English as a Second Language from the University of Hawai'i and PhD in linguistics from the University of California at Santa Barbara. He has been lecturing in Indonesian Studies at the University of Melbourne since 1996 and previously taught at Syiah Kuala University and Lampung University in Indonesia and at the University of Hawai'i. Michael's research interests involve usage-based analyses of Indonesian, Javanese and languages of Maluku.

Machida, Sayuki

Dr Sayuki Machida has received her MEd from Rutgers University, USA, and PhD from the University of Queensland, Australia. She is currently a lecturer in the Japanese Program at the Asian Institute, the University of Melbourne, Australia. Prior to the current position, she taught at the University of Queensland and Rutgers University, and English as a second language in Japan. Her research interests include interlanguage (learners' language) development, text comprehension, language and cognition. Her interests also extend to curriculum development and language course management, and teaching methodology.

McDonald, Edward

Dr Edward McDonald has an MA from Peking University and a PhD from Macquarie University in the grammar of modern Chinese. He has taught Chinese language, linguistics and semiotics at the National University of Singapore, Tsinghua University and in his current position at the University of Auckland. His research interests lie in grammar and discourse analysis, pedagogical grammar and popular culture.

Shima, Chiharu

Chiharu Shima, M.A. (Monash University, Australia), is currently studying for a PhD in the Doctoral Program in Second Language Acquisition (SLA) in the Language Institute at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, USA. She is also a project/teaching assistant of Japanese in the Department of East Asian Languages and Literature at the UW-Madison. Her research interests include classroom ethnography, Japanese language pedagogy, and intercultural communication.

Yoshimitsu, Kuniko

Kuniko Yoshimitsu lectures in the Japanese Studies Program at Monash University, Australia. She received her M.A. and Ph.D. in Japanese Sociolinguistics at Monash University. Her research interests include L1 maintenance and shift, study management of L2 students, and the negotiation of bilingual and bicultural identity.