Contributors to this issue

Black, Paul

Paul Black is a Senior Lecturer in Applied Linguistics in the Centre for Access and ESL of the Charles Darwin University in Darwin, Australia. His research interests range from social and cultural issues in language education to the comparative historical study of Australian indigenous languages. He has also taught English at Waseda University in Tokyo during the 1991-93 and 2003-04 academic years.

Friedlander, Peter G.

Peter Friedlander is Research Fellow in Hindi in the department of Asian Studies at La Trobe University in Melbourne Australia. He teaches Hindi language and Buddhist studies and his research interests include the history of Hindi teaching, Hindi literature and Buddhist Studies. He is also involved in online projects about the development of colonial literature such as the Digital Colonial Documents Database (http://www.chaf.lib.latrobe.edu.au/dcd/default.htm). His publications include works on Hindi literature, such as The Songs of Daya Bai (with Harry Aveling, 2005), and on Buddhist Studies, such as a chapter on “Buddhism and Politics” in The Politics of Religion. A Survey (edited by Jeff Haynes, 2006).

Nakahara, Masumi

Masumi Nakahara has been teaching Japanese in Australia since 1999. Currently she is teaching Japanese part-time for the Northern Territory School of Languages in Darwin while undertaking doctoral research on 'Becoming an intercultural teacher of Japanese' in the Centre for Access and ESL of the Charles Darwin University.

Taguchi, Kazuyo

Kazuyo Taguchi is a lecturer in Japanese at the University of Adelaide and University of South Australia. She completed her doctorate degree at Flinders University in 2005. Her main research interests are vocabulary acquisition and measuring language proficiency. She has recently started exploring the area of biculturalism, its concept and acquisition processes.

Wang, Yuping

Yuping Wang is Senior Lecturer of Chinese language at Griffith University, Australia. Her research focuses on the use of Synchronous Computer Mediated Communication (SCMC) in second language teaching and learning. Her other research interests include distance language education, Chinese language software development and second language teaching and learning methodologies. She has published several articles on the use of videoconferencing tools in distance language learning.